The trial of the case of Robert Clark against the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company was concluded yesterials afternoon in the United States Court.

The suit was to recover $20,000 for damages sustained by the plaintiff in falling into an excavation made by the defendant company.

The argument was quite elaborate, Messra Allan and Parrish appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. B. B. Munford for the defendant.

The case was given to the jury yesterday afternoon about quarter-past 4 o'clock. In a few seconds they returned to the room and stated to the Court that it would be impossible for them to agree. Upon this Judge Hughes at once ordered them discharged from this case.

It is understood that eight of the jury favored a verdict for the defendant, two were for a small sum, and one each for $500 and $10,000.
